FIRST QUARTER | 2018

Congress' sweeping overhaul of the tax code presents a range of planning opportunities for investors. For individual taxpayers, the headline provisions include a lowering of the top tax rate to 37% from 39.6%. There could also be secondary benefits to investors resulting from lower corporate taxes. A deeper look at the new tax law, though, reveals equally important changes beyond tax rates, especially for business owners. Individuals are also potentially affected, especially when it comes to their retirement accounts, philanthropy and education savings accounts.

What's Changing?

1. Big breaks for business owners who qualify for pass-through income.

Perhaps the most significant tax change for individuals is the modification in the treatment of income from pass-through entities. Many businesses are pass-through entities, so the effect could be large and swift. Pass-through income is generated via business income from business structures like partnerships, S corporations and sole proprietorships.

The new tax rates have a large effect on pass-through income, since this form of income is currently taxed to the end taxpayer, not at the corporate level. In 2017, this popular type of business income potentially faced the maximum tax rate of 39.6%.

That changes in 2018. If you're eligible for the pass-through deduction, 20% of taxable income gets taken off the table for tax calculation purposes. That means if you're in the new highest 37% tax rate for 2018, this rule lowers your effective tax rate to 29.6%.

Who This Affects: Many business owners who receive pass-through income including professionals like doctors and lawyers as well as some financial advisors. There is complexity, though, that might curtail this option for some, so it's important to consult your tax professional.

What to Consider: Business owners might consider converting from a C corporation structure to S corporation or partnership to take advantage of the pass-through preference. Retirement plan contributions, however, may dilute the benefit of the pass-through deduction.

2. Limits rise even more for estate and gift taxes.

Federal estate taxes affect a small subset of high net worth investors now, but that number is likely to dwindle even further. That's because new tax rules double the federal estate tax exclusion to $11 million for individuals and $22 million for couples. Very few estates are this large, making this type of planning even more of a specialty for advisors.

Who This Affects: A very small percentage of the population with an estate value at death of $11 million.

What to Consider: Estate planning strategies can be recalibrated for a much higher upward limit.

3. Expansion of 529 education savings accounts make them even more useful.

Since their creation in 2001, 529s could only be used for college expenses. But now, for the first time, these accounts can be used for primary and secondary education expenses up to $10,000 a year per student. This is a big expansion of the appeal and utility of 529 plans.

FIRST QUARTER | 2018

Previously, investors looking for tax preference on education costs prior to college had to use other account types such as Coverdell Education Accounts. Coverdell accounts will remain available, despite speculation they would be curtailed. Those accounts have disadvantages to 529s, though, including much lower contribution limits.

Who This Affects: Clients looking for ways to gain tax efficiency when paying for private school prior to college. 529s plans are growing in popularity, but there are many investors who have yet to take advantage of their numerous benefits.

What to Consider: The 529 account is now potentially even more compelling than it was before. Contribution limits remain the same, allowing for annual contributions in 2018 of $15,000 for single taxpayers and $30,000 for those married filing jointly. Some taxpayers might consider making five years of contributions ahead of time, amounting to $75,000 for individuals or $150,000 for couples.

3. The cap on state income tax deductions and doubling of standardized deductions changes the math.

Many of the tax changes are positives for investors, at least in the early years, but not all. Over time, some taxpayers could end up in higher brackets due to a change in the way the annual increases to the brackets are calculated.

The math gets more complicated in other ways. For instance, taxpayers' state and local income tax deduction is capped at $10,000, which is a negative for taxpayers in states with higher state taxes. But, the standard deduction is also doubled to $12,000 for individuals and $24,000 for married couples.

Who This Affects: The increase in the standard deduction could have ramifications on charitable giving, which is an itemized deduction. Investors who take the standard deduction in 2018 may not get any tax benefit from charitable giving. The tax bill also eliminates all miscellaneous itemized deductions. One of those deductions is for investment expenses. Fees to financial advisors will no longer be deductible.

What to Consider: Philanthropic investors, who itemize, might consider accelerating donations to before December 31, 2017. As with many provisions for individuals, the limit on state and local tax deductibility expires in 2025. Meanwhile, the complex alternative minimum tax remains, but has been restructured in a way that is likely to affect far fewer people.

What's Not Changing?

While much attention is paid to the parts of the tax code that are changing, perhaps equally as important to investors are aspects that are staying the same.

1. Tax rates on dividends and capital gains remain unchanged.

Tax rates on dividends and long-term capital gains stay where they are in 2018. For capital gains and qualified dividends, that means a maximum tax rate of 15% for taxpayers in the lower tax brackets. For those in the highest tax bracket, the tax rate is 23.8%, including the 3.8% Net Investment Income Tax, associated with the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

Who This Affects: Investors with taxable portfolios that generate dividends or where investment sales are being considered.

What to Consider: Investors and advisors can continue to strategically position investments in accounts to take advantage of preferential tax treatment given to qualified dividends and long-term capital gains.

2. Tax benefits to retirement accounts, such as 401(k)s and IRAs, stand.

Good news for investors in 401(k) retirement plans: The tax benefits of tax-deferred retirement accounts stand, despite worries they would be curtailed. Changes were small and affect only a subset of taxpayers and investors.

Who This Affects: Retirement accounts remain attractive options for taxpayers looking to save and invest for their retirement.

What to Consider: There are some minor changes that investors should be aware of. For instance, investors who converted funds from a traditional IRA to a Roth IRA can no longer undo or recharacterize the conversion once it's done. Investors may want to check with their tax professionals to see if any other changes affect them.

3. Tax-lot selling rules stay the same.

Investors are still able to determine the most appropriate tax lot to use for cost-basis purposes on investment sales. This preserves an important planning tool for investors. In some versions of the tax bill, it was proposed investors would need to use first-in first-out (FIFO) accounting, where investors would use the cost basis of the shares they bought first. That could have meant higher capital gains for many investors.

Who This Affects: Tax-aware investors who have bought investments over time, have unrealized gains and are considering selling.

What to Consider: Investors and advisors are still able to analyze investments bought over time and consider which lots are most appropriate to sell for tax purposes. Investors can choose the specific lots to use for cost basis, or, in many cases with mutual fund shares, opt for the average cost of the shares bought over time.

4. Municipal bonds' appeal is unchanged.

The reduction of the top tax rate could reduce the appeal of municipal bonds for some taxpayers. But at the same time, munis get more interesting due to the loss of itemized deductions. The bottom line: Munis remain important options for tax-aware investors.

Who This Affects: Investors who look to municipal bonds as a source of tax-exempt income.

What to Consider: Demand for municipal bonds from banks and insurers may ease a little. But individuals seeking income may still find municipals to be a potential source of tax-advantaged income and diversification. For higher tax bracket investors in states like New York and California, the relative attractiveness of local bonds could actually improve.

2018 TAX BRACKETS

With the passage of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA), many tax brackets, thresholds, and rates will change in 2018. Noticeable changes to the structure of the individual tax code include the elimination of personal exemptions, the elimination of the Pease limitation on itemized deductions, and the expansion of the Child Tax Credit.

Additionally, on a yearly basis the IRS adjusts more than 40 tax provisions for inflation. This is done to prevent what is called “bracket creep,” when people are pushed into higher income tax brackets or have reduced value from credits or deductions due to inflation, instead of any increase in real income.

The IRS used to use the Consumer Price Index (CPI) to calculate the past year’s inflation. However, with the TCJA, the IRS will now use the Chained Consumer Price Index (C-CPI) to adjust income thresholds, deduction amounts, and credit values accordingly.

Income Tax Brackets and Rates

In 2018, the income limits for all tax brackets and all filers will be adjusted for inflation and will be as follows (Table 1). The top marginal income tax rate of 37 percent will hit taxpayers with taxable income of $500,000 and higher for single filers and $600,000 and higher for married couples filing jointly.

Table 1. Tax Brackets and Rates, 2018

Rate	For Unmarried Individuals, Taxable Income Over	For Married Individuals, Filing Joint Returns, Taxable Income Over	For Heads of Households, Taxable Income Over
10%	$0	$0	$0
12%	$9,525	$19,050	$13,600
22%	$38,700	$77,400	$51,800
24%	$82,500	$165,000	$82,500

37%	$500,000	$600,000	$500,000

Standard Deduction and Personal Exemption

The standard deduction for single filers will increase by $5,500 and by $11,000 for married couples filing jointly (Table 2).

The personal exemption for 2018 is eliminated.

Alternative Minimum Tax

The Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT) was created in the 1960s to prevent high-income taxpayers from avoiding the individual income tax. This parallel tax income system requires high-income taxpayers to calculate their tax bill twice: once under the ordinary income tax system and again under the AMT. The taxpayer then needs to pay the higher of the two.

The AMT uses an alternative definition of taxable income called Alternative Minimum Taxable Income (AMTI). To prevent low- and middle-income taxpayers from being subject to the AMT, taxpayers are allowed to exempt a significant amount of their income from AMTI. However, this exemption phases out for high-income taxpayers. The AMT is levied at two rates: 26 percent and 28 percent.

The AMT exemption amount for 2018 is $70,300 for singles and $109,400 for married couples filing jointly (Table 3).

Table 3. 2018 Alternative Minimum Tax Exemptions

Filing Status	Exemption Amount
Unmarried Individuals	$70,300
Married Filing Jointly	$109,400

In 2018, the 28 percent AMT rate applies to excess AMTI of $191,500 for all taxpayers ($95,750 for married couples filing joint returns).

Under the TCJA, AMT exemptions phase out at 25 cents per dollar earned once taxpayer AMTI hits a certain threshold.

In 2018, the exemption will start phasing out at $500,000 in AMTI for single filers and $1 million for married taxpayers filing jointly (Table 4.)

Table 4. 2018 Alternative Minimum Tax Exemption Phase-out Thresholds

Filing Status	Exemption Amount
Unmarried Individuals	$500,000
Married Filing Jointly	$1,000,000
